Radnor Gate to Reopen Due to Protest

By Pam Pasqualini

After conferring with Neil McMahon, Student Government President, Dean Robert Sedivy has decided to reopen the Radnor Avenue entrance to the campus. The meeting was a result of much student protest concerning the Dean's earlier decision to close off that entrance.

The gate will now be closed from 1 a.m. until 7 a.m., Monday through Friday, and from 3 a.m. until 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday. When classes are not in session it will be closed 24 hours.

Student protest centered on the inconvenience of having to drive to the Underwood Apartments and the library by way of Cold Spring Lane and York Road. Many students complained that no advance publicity was given of the decision to block off the entrance, and that students were not consulted about the plan.

Confusion resulted on Monday morning when cars drove up Radnor Avenue only to find the entrance closed off. A line of cars formed and they were forced to back up the street to untangle the traffic jam.

Several students reported that they almost hit the gate as they came upon it unexpectedly.

Dean Sedivy explained three reasons for the closing: complaints from neighbors, security, and safety. He has received numerous complaints from the Radnor-Winston Community Association about the conditions that exist in the area.

The neighbors are upset about the continual flow of traffic through these streets and the alley from Radnor to Winston Avenues. Many cars speed and there are several small children living in the vicinity who could be hit by a car. There have been complaints about beer bottles being thrown in yards from passing cars.

Many students habitually drive from the library and the apartments to the main part of campus. The Dean says that the campus does not have parking facilities for this. The parking lot at the library is only intended for library use and a plan to prevent those who are not using the library from parking there is in the works.

A problem caused by leaving the exit open is the stream of strangers driving through campus. For example, the Dean said one night during Christmas vacation 29 cars came through between 10 p.m. and 2 a.m. and only two of them were connected with the campus. This easy access to the parking lot has led to some of the car vandalism and theft on campus, the Dean feels.

A safety hazard exists with the gate open because cars speed through the parking lot and out Radnor Avenue. To cope with this, traffic bumps will be installed east of Butler Hall and west of Radnor gate. The speed bump located next to the Physical Plant will be removed.

Dean Sedivy hopes to achieve an awareness by the students of the neighbor's problems. Neil McMahon emphasized that the students must be aware of the residential surroundings and slow down.

Mr. Robert Blum, President of the Radnor-Winston Association, was unaware of the new gate when he was contacted by THE GREYHOUND. He feels that the members of the Association would like to see the gate closed all of the time, but that closing it at night will be satisfactory.

McMahon, Illiano Explain NSA

By Anne Worthington

Neil McMahon and Ed Illiano recently attended a National Student Association Conference in Atlantic City, New Jersey. They stated that the student government of Loyola joined NSA because of the vast resources it has in relation to student problems and solutions. It is possible to write to NSA about a specific situation and they will send back various solutions that other colleges came up with.

The National Student Association is the oldest and largest organization of student governments in the country. There is a current membership of 500 colleges in the organization.

NSA was founded in 1947 by American delegates returning from a conference of the International Union of Students in Prague. The Americans felt there was a need to represent students in the IUS, but eventually rejected membership as the IUS was largely Communist controlled.

In the early years of the NSA, it was largely funded by the CIA apparently as a way of monitoring international student activities. However, in 1966, the NSA broke off and became politically and financially autonomous.

The basic unit of the NSA is the local student government as over 90% of accredited colleges have some type of self governing organization. It is also considered as representative of a student body. A school may affiliate with NSA either by an all-school referendum or by decision of a democratically elected student government. The annual National Student Congress is the legislative body of NSA, and establishes all policies and programs of the Association. Each member school may send one or more voting delegates to these meetings according to school enrollment.

The first and foremost concern of the students of NSA is for student rights and freedoms. As a result, NSA offers a wide variety of services to students. The first is the NSA Life Insurance Trust. This offers a low cost term life insurance to students enrolled at colleges or universities. The policy can be kept after graduation with slight increases in premiums.

The Association also sponsors a nationwide book club, with no membership fee required, which guarantees

Kirwan to Resign From Library; Will Assume New Position in Fall

By Ed Gainor

Mr. William Kirwan has announced his resignation as Director of the Loyola-Notre Dame Library, effective with the close of the spring semester.

Mr. Kirwan will take over in June as the Director of Library Services for all campuses of the West Virginia College of Graduate Studies. The Board of Trustees is presently considering possible replacements, but has yet to choose a successor for the departing Library Director.

A native of Buffalo, New York, Mr. Kirwan lived in Baltimore for four years before coming to Loyola as an assistant librarian in 1966. He assumed the office of Head Librarian in 1967, a post which he held for five and a half years before being asked, on the recommendation of the College of Notre Dame, to accept the directorship of the Loyola-Notre Dame Library.

Mr. Kirwan was hired by West Virginia College after he applied in answer to an ad. While admitting that he "had been looking," he emphasized that it was not dissatisfaction with his present position which had prompted his move.

"There's a time in one's life when one has to make a decision, and I felt my time had come," Mr. Kirwan explained. "I have reached a point, in terms of age and career, where this is a logical time to move on."

Mr. Kirwan further indicated that his new position is "a step up" professionally, and will include a "significant increase" in salary.

"It was an opportunity that I just couldn't turn down," he said.

In the eight years that he has been associated with Loyola, Mr. Kirwan has observed two primary changes.

"The most heartening thing has been the steady improvement in the administration of the college. That's not to say there haven't been problem areas," he amended, "but overall the college is very well administered."

The Library Director has also noted a considerable change in Loyola's students.

"The quality of the student body has improved," he said. "The students are academically better prepared, and show a greater diversity of interests and backgrounds."

"I'm really going to miss these two colleges, the people I've worked with, and Baltimore," Mr. Kirwan said. "I know that I got my new job on the strength of my position here. I've had a rare opportunity here—I appreciate it, and I'll always be grateful."

Branch Takes Over Saga; Asks Student Co-operation

By Gerry Krebs

Loyola received a new director for the Saga Food Service over the Easter break, Mr. Thomas Branch, who has been employed by Saga for the past three and a half years.

Mr. Branch is a graduate of Hillsdale College in Michigan and George Washington University in the District of Columbia. He took over the position after the departure of Cal Cavalier. Before this current assignment, Mr. Branch held positions for Saga Food Service at Montclair State College in New Jersey and The University of Pittsburgh.

When asked if he would change any policies currently carried on by the food service here at Loyola, Mr. Branch replied that since Saga is contracted to Loyola College that the college sets the policy and Saga is just in a management position of preparing food and hiring help. Mr. Branch pointed out that many of the complaints leveled at the food service are misguided, such as the maintenance of the clean up of the cafeteria. Here he pointed out that cleaning the cafeteria was under a different contract and the Food Service has nothing to do with it.

Mr. Branch also pointed out

SGA Survey Favors Raise of Activity Fee

By John Franklin

Early returns of the parent survey concerning an increased activity fee indicates that a majority of the parents are in favor of raising the present $30 fee.

One-hundred twenty-one of the 157 returns are in favor of the increase while 36 are against.

Over 61% of the 121 favorable replies are in favor of a $15 increase, while 27% called for a $10 raise. The remaining 12% indicated that a $5 jump was satisfactory.

Gene Ostendorf, Senate Finance Committee Chairman, explained that a packet detailing an activity fee increase was mailed to the parents of every freshman, sophomore and junior before Easter.

The packet included a letter of introduction, a grid stating activity fees at comparable colleges to Loyola, a synopsis of plans for increased revenue, and a postcard for the parents' opinion to be mailed back to the Student Government.

This is the second phase of the three phase plan to increase the activity fee. The first phase was to poll other colleges similar to Loyola to learn the amount and distribution of their fee. The second phase of polling the parents is almost completed. The final phase consisting of a student petition drive is currently underway.

The student petitioning will take place over several days since the Senate Finance Committee "would like to get as many signatures as possible." The committee does, however, need at least 51% to indicate that a majority of the students are in favor of an increase.

When the petitioning is completed and if a majority of students have signed it, the results of the three phases will be taken to the May 4 meeting of the Board of Trustees.

"I assume that the Board of Trustees' decision will be fairly immediate," says Committee spokesman Kevin Quinn.

Board to Host 'May-hem'

The event is hosted by the Loyola College Board of Trustees and is described as "An evening of merriment, music and miscellany, by, for, and with Loyola College. And in honor of Edward J. Donnelly, past chairman, Loyola College Board of Trustees."

A softball game will start off the afternoon, beginning at 4 pm. Students, faculty, administration are all invited to play according to Stu Rochester, organizer of the teams.

Events will include a pop concert by the "Aristocrats Orchestra," musical May-hem by "The Group," and a tribute to Edward Donnelly by Father Sellinger. There will also be student awards, the annual Distinguished Teacher Award and a State of the College Address by Edward J. Donnelly.

Plans are being finalized for the MAY-hem celebration May 10. The location will be in the area enclosed by Maryland Hall, Jenkins Science Building, the former Jenkins Library and the Jesuit Residence.

After the official ceremonies, a rock band, Fable, will play until midnight. Refreshments will be served including hamburgers, hot-dogs, sodas and beer.

It was emphasized that the affair is very informal and all members of the Loyola College community are welcome.

The rain date will be Saturday, May 11.

Library Pond Cleanup Called 'Semi-Successful'

By Rock Rochowiak

The much-needed library pond cleanup was held Saturday, April 6th. Project leader, Junior Tom Peri, believes that the cleanup was "relatively" successful.

"The nine people that showed up worked really hard" Mr. Peri states. One of those nine was a Notre Dame student. The weather may have kept people away since it was a cold, cloudy day. "In two and a half hours we got a dump truck full of trash" Mr. Peri relates. During the course of the cleanup a member of the Notre Dame food service donated hot chocolate and donuts to the workers.

Most of the trash consisted of beer cans, bottles and building materials, such as wooden beams. Also removed were a refrigerator and exhaust fan.

However there are still problems to be solved. "The pond is still heavily sedimented, and contains a great quantity of leaves," Mr. Peri states. He suggests that a bulldozer is needed to clear the pond. The water near the center of the pond is still only about a foot deep, instead of the original three feet.

In addition, the cans have reappeared since the cleanup. Mr. Peri believes that the Loyola Notre-Dame students should exercise more responsibility for the pond. "The surrounding community (Notre Dame, houses behind Notre Dame Lane to Homewood, and Springlake community) should also be more responsible, not to the pond specifically, but to the stream leading into it" Mr. Peri explains. He also hopes that the Loyola students and administration will put some pressure on the upstream communities to act more ecologically toward the stream.

Mr. Peri hopes to organize another cleanup in the fall, with a better student turnout. To the nine students who participated this time Mr. Peri extends his thanks, stating that their work was not worthless, even if the pond is again, slowly, filling with beer cans.

NSA Offers Student Benefits

discounts of 10% on any book in print. The plan offers lifetime membership privileges with no minimum purchase requirements. NSA has a travel and car plan which offers students options with auto rental, leasing and purchases. The travel plan helps initiate charter flights, youth-fare tickets, and discount passes to students.

Neil McMahon and Ed Illiano are presently working on bringing these services to the attention of Loyola students. They called the NSA an "invaluable bank of information."

Mr. Illiano and Mr. McMahon both said they had learned a great deal from the conference. They stated that they were particularly interested in student's rights. "Students in public schools have the same rights as citizens; in some private schools they attempt to regulate whether or not you can live on or off campus."

"We also learned about student unionism. When you buy a TV or car, you get a guarantee. It should be the same with school. You would pay tuition and then the union could bargain with the Administration for a guarantee. You could argue any violations of this."

According to Mr. Illiano, the student movement is still alive and well, but the issues are more concerned with internal problems on campus rather than national issues. This makes student government even more important in determining student affairs, which NSA is concerned with.

Mr. McMahon and Mr. Illiano said they realized through the convention that Loyola is not the only school with problems, "we saw that schools had exactly the same problems we have and we had the opportunity to discuss how they dealt with them. We also saw how potentially powerful the Senate could be -- in some schools they investigate into matters and practically run the school. Nevertheless, we got a lot out of the convention and hope to utilize some of the things we learned and suggestions we discussed with others."

that here at Loyola the students are hurting themselves. He illustrated this point saying that resident students who have meal cards come through the line and get food for other students not on the meal plan as well as themselves. This situation added to the fact that the food service is operating on a tight budget is partly responsible for the rising cost of operation.

Mr. Branch explained that the school tries to maintain a high standard of student satisfaction with a minimum charge to the students and this can only be done with the cooperation of the students with the food service operation.

A lack of student concern and irresponsibility in cleaning up the cafeteria following the prescribed food plan is seen by Mr. Branch as a factor contributing to the problems arising between the students and the food service.

He feels more student responsibility in these areas will help lessen the friction between the students and the food plan at Loyola.

The Declaration of Independence — What Does It Mean?

By Dr. Nicholas Varga
Part Two

These general ideas are given concrete application in the third major part of the Declaration of Independence which is an indictment of the King of England. The overall charge is that George III aimed at the "the establishment of an absolute Tyranny." While most of the quarreling between the colonies and the mother country during the preceding decade had been addressed to specific Acts of Parliament, the American Declaration could not be persuasive unless it implicated the King. Throughout the Stamp Act troubles and the agitation over the Townshend Duties the colonists had appealed over the head of Parliament to the King as their gracious sovereign. This playing-of-one-side-against-another tactic succeeded in getting George III to force Parliament to repeal its obnoxious enactments. Now, if independence was to be justified, the attack had to be shifted to the King because it was to him that the colonists owed their allegiance. The theory that the monarch embodied the sovereignty of the nation was not peculiar to England; it was in fact shared by all European states of that day. It has even been echoed in the recent arguments over presidential immunity and executive privilege expounded during the course of the "Watergate" affair. It is a familiar defense of incumbent authority. Only if George III, himself, were aiming at "absolute Tyranny" could the American Declaration be logically acceptable.

To support the charge against the King, the Declaration listed twenty-seven acts which together "proved" his persistently oppressive intentions. The specifications, in the main, centered on acts interfering with the exercise of local legislative powers. Good and necessary laws were vetoed; representation was restricted; legislatures were harassed by frequent adjournments and elections; the locus of meetings was arbitrarily changed. The importance of these charges arises from the fact that making law was considered the essential political power in society and George III would not peacefully share this function with popularly elected colonial legislatures.

The next class in the specifications were acts by which the King interfered with the colonial judiciary. While judges in England enjoyed considerable protection against executive power, the King had disallowed laws to extend similar immunities to the judges in America. They served at his will and pleasure; how much and when they were paid was reserved to the royal whim. The Crown might accept a more independent judiciary in Britain but it clearly was not about to yield any of its power to control the colonial bench.

What followed were other charges relating to the imposition of military authority on the Americans. The net effect was "to render the Military independent of the superior to the Civil Power." Furthermore, English soldiers accused of murder were not to be tried in an American court but were to be transported elsewhere to shield them from popular justice. Again, what was not acceptable practice in Britain was being imposed by the King on his subjects in America.

The next counts in the indictment are a miscellaneous combination. While they can not be collected under a general heading, they dealt with such vital matters as trial by jury and taxation only by consent. Here too, loyal subjects of the King in the colonies were being subordinated to Crown authority in an unacceptable way.

The remaining five or so charges are directed at the King's actions during the revolutionary crisis. Whether these were acts of a tyrant or legitimate efforts to maintain law and order depends, of course, on whether or not you side with the Americans. If you accept the "patriot" argument, then the hiring of mercenaries, the incitement of the Indians, the impressment of colonists into the British navy and the military operations in America can rightly be viewed as additional evidences of the King's intentions.

Even without these last specifications, it was a formidable indictment. Together with the general propositions it indicates how firmly we are committed to the idea that public authority must be limited and that unlimited power is despotic.

VIII

However, it was not enough to assert and "prove" the King to be a tyrant. It was thought necessary to establish as well that the colonists had acted properly and vigorously to prevent oppression. This is done in the fourth major part of the Declaration.

In it, we note our many petitions to George III for a redress of grievances. To these respectful memorials, the King replied not with royal and fatherly solicitude but with "repeated injury." The Americans had also presented their case to their British brethren. We had appealed to their "native justice and magnanimity." But they too had proven deaf to both the claims of right and blood.

Originally Jefferson had included a more severe indictment of the British people in his draft of the Declaration. His charge was not only against the head but also the body, as well. Congress prudently erased this portion from the draft and narrowed the focus of the indictment to George III, alone. There was at least some vague hope that we were not entirely without friends in Britain. These were in a minority and could not be expected to promote any movement in our behalf if we attacked the whole British people. Not much reliance could be vested in these potential allies but no possible resource for victory was to be needlessly wasted.

IX

The final section is the operative declaration. As if to indicate some uncertainty about what to call the new nation there is a slight shift of terminology in these passages. The first reference is to the "United States of America" while later the phrase "United Colonies" appears. The latter would obviously be inappropriate as the title of an independent nation while the former style could be readily adopted—with only the formality of capitalizing the first two words. From both the text and the "physical" circumstances, it seems clear enough that one nation made up of States declared its independence of Great Britain.

X

This proclamation was gradually disseminated to the public on both sides of the Atlantic. On these shores, it contributed to the growing cohesion among Americans in their struggle against Britain and its mercenary allies. Across the seas, it had to be viewed by the crowned heads and bewigged aristocracy as a minor impertinence by foolishly idealistic and boastful Yankees. Nevertheless, the Declaration of Independence would eventually come to be judged "the best known and noblest of American State papers...reasoned enough to carry conviction, fervent enough to inspire enthusiasm..." It is part of our heritage: it proclaims America's enduring ideals.

"A Thurber Carnival," the New York revue hit in which the wit and fun of the late James Thurber's famous cartoons and stories are brought to life on the stage, will be presented at Loyola on Wednesday evening, May 1, in a "dinner theatre" format in the College's Cafeteria.

Tickets continue on sale today for the dinner portion only. There is no admission charge for the performance itself.

When the collection of Thurberian fables, parables, reminiscences, stories, drawings and captions was first staged in 1960, it prompted Life Magazine to declare Thurber "the greatest working humorist of our day."

The Alpha-Omega players, a national touring repertory theatre company from Dallas, will perform the 16 Thurber sketches beginning at 7 p.m.

The Great Gate Debate

It is a fortunate thing Dean Sedivy decided to reopen the Radnor Avenue entrance to the campus because it was going to be opened anyway. All types of schemes and plans had been nearly finalized such as renting a bulldozer, setting bombs and sawing off the locks. In any case, that gate was not going to last much longer.

If one major reason was safety for the student, it is hardly safe to come screeching to a halt in front of a gate whose presence received no advance warning. No one had any idea this gate was to be put up, and it resulted in a massive, inconvenient and potentially dangerous traffic jam this week. One can hardly call this safety. The suggestion of putting in more traffic bumps is much better and could discourage some very dangerous speeding that does occur near the gate entrance. This is much more reasonable than shutting off the entrance entirely.

Although Dean Sedivy is in charge of security procedures, it is questionable whether or not he has the authority to put up such a gate without first consulting the Student Life Commission or representatives of Student Government. As it is an issue that has many pro's and con's, taking action without consulting any other campus organizations could, and did, result in a conflict.

The theory, however admirable, is that everyone should walk on campus but that, obviously, is not the practice. People are going to continue to drive everywhere they go, aside from the fact that walking to the library is very unpleasant in bad weather.

The conflict with the neighborhood is very real and understandable. Students should be more considerate but as that is unlikely to change, there is not much Loyola can do except speed up the construction of some type of inter-campus roadway. Anyhow, the neighborhood should have accepted the fact that we aren't going anywhere and they are stuck with us.

As for vandalism, if outsiders want to get in, they'll do it, and it has even been suggested that a significant number of on-campus crimes are committed by students.

So-keep the gate open and avoid a major revolution!

Letters to the Editor

To the Editor

This letter is a comment on the fine article Lance Brown wrote about the Colgate tennis team. Unfortunately, Mr. Brown was so overwhelmed by Colgate's team he neglected to say much concerning the Loyola tennis team. Several of Mr. Brown's remarks were erroneous and he omitted things that should be said.

First, we have been a fine tennis team this year with several players who ranked in their respective states. Secondly, although Mr. Brown was very impressed with Colgate's coach, he neglected to mention that we have a new coach, Darrell Russell, who is doing an excellent job. For the first time in my four years here, I feel I have a tennis coach who is sincerely interested in me as a player and a person. I would also like to point out for Mr. Brown's information that the tennis team has the best record of any team at Loyola, and our former coach, Vince Collimore retired last year as the winningest coach in Mason Dixon history.

Lastly, I would like to comment on Mr. Brown's cheap shot at Kevin Kavanaugh. It seems the Greyhound staff is unaware that the athletic budget for this year was set before Mr. Kavanaugh was named Athletic Director. It seems that the athletic department knows of two sports-major sports (soccer, basketball, baseball and lacrosse) and minor sports (tennis, golf, swimming, track, cross country and wrestling).

To give an example of how "minor" sports at Loyola are handled here is what occurred last year. The tennis team traveled to Mt. St. Marys for a match. Each player is allotted $2.00 for his meal, and whoever drives is given between $5.00 and $10.00 for gas. After the match began we were rained out. When we returned and asked Lefty Reitz to reschedule the match he said he could not provide us with the money for gas or food (approximately $20.00), so we had to pay these expenses out of our own pockets. I wonder where they got the money to buy the trophy saying "1973 Mason Dixon tennis championship."

The athletic department is always ready to take credit for a victorious team, but they don't always give the best support in terms of money and equipment to teams who play "minor" sports. So Mr. Brown's criticism of the new director was unfair since it is not his policy, but the past policy of the athletic department to limit the number of tennis balls. I trust Mr. Kavanaugh will try very hard to upgrade the school's support for "minor" sports.

I suggest Mr. Brown watch the tennis at our matches instead of counting the tennis balls, and he just might be surprised how well we are capable of playing.

Sincerely,

Tee Tillman
Co-captain 1974 Tennis Team

To the Editor,

First of all, I want to thank The Greyhound and Mr. Burall for the kind and accurate article about me which appeared in the April 5 issue. I would like to make two clarifications, however, in the last part of the article. After saying that I thought Fr. Dockery is doing a very good job, the article says "Fr. Ahern was not as happy with the performance of the students." To say "not as happy" does not mean that I am "unhappy" with their performance. Mr. Burall does not make that implication and I would not want others to make it. To be back, even on a limited basis, with the Loyola students has been a source of great strength and joy to me.

The second clarification refers to my comment "students will only be interested in the things that directly affect them." This statement was made in the context of the social activism present on campus during the Viet-Nam War in contrast to a lessening of activism now. At the moment there are no issues that so directly affect the male students' lives especially as the Draft and the War did. The response of the student body on April 3 to the Kidney and Eye Bank Day was a real sign that students are interested in the welfare of others. For that response I am most grateful and I would like to thank the SGA for their generous contribution, the students who ran the money-raising activities and especially those who volunteered to donate, at the time of their death, their kidneys and/or eyes so that someone else may see and live a fuller life.

Sincerely yours,
Eugene Ahern, S.J.

Guest Column

(A one-time professor, editor, World War II serviceman in the South Pacific, and Pulitzer Prize winner, James A. Michener has brought a whole new dimension to the world of literature. One of the most prolific and exciting writers of the last three decades, Mr. Michener has authored such best-selling novels as Hawaii, Caravans, Iberia, and The Drifters.)

Don't be too calculating. Don't be too scientific. Don't let the shrinks terrify you or dictate the movements of your life.

There is a divine irrelevance in the universe and may men and women win through to a sense of greatness in their lives by stumbling and fumbling their way into patterns that gratify them and allow them to utilize their endowments to the maximum.

If Swarthmore College in 1925 had employed even a half-way decent guidance counselor, I would have spent my life as an assistant professor of education in some midwestern university. Because when I reported to college it must have been apparent to everyone that I was destined for some kind of academic career. Nevertheless, I was allowed to take Spanish, which leads to nothing, instead of French or German, which as everyone knows are important languages studied by serious students who wish to gain a Ph.D.

I cannot tell you how often I was penalized for having taken a frivolous language like Spanish instead of a decent, self-respecting tongue like French. In the end, I sacrificed my academic career.

Instead, I continued to putter around with Spanish and found a deep affinity for it. In the end, I was able to write a book about Spain which will probably live longer than anything else I've done. In other words, I blindly backed into a minor masterpiece. There are thousands of people competent to write about France, and if I had taken that language in college I would have been prepared to add no new ideas to general knowledge. It was Spanish that opened up for me a whole new universe of concepts and ideas.

I wrote nothing until I was forty. This tardy beginning, one might say this delinquency, stemmed from the fact that I had spent a good deal of my early time knocking around this country and Europe, trying to find out what I believed in, what values were large enough to enlist my sympathies during what I sensed would be a long and confused life. Had I committed myself at age eighteen, as I was encouraged to do, I would not even have known the parameters of the problem, and any choice I might have made then would have had to be wrong.

It took me forty years to find out the facts. As a consequence, I have never been able to feel anxiety about young people who are fumbling their way toward the enlightenment that will keep them going. I doubt that a young man-- unless he wants to be a doctor or a research chemist, where a substantial body of specific knowledge must be mastered within a prescribed time -- can waste time, regardless of what he does. I believe you have till age thirty-five to decide finally on what you are going to do, and that any exploration you pursue in the process will in the end turn out to have been creative.

Indeed, it may well be the year that observers describe as "wasted" that will prove to have been the most productive of those insights which will keep you going. The trip to Egypt. The two years spent working as a runner for a bank. The spell you spent on the newspaper in Idaho. Your apprenticeship at a trade. These are the ways in which a young man ought to spend his life..the ways of waste that lead to true intelligence.

Two more comments. Throughout my life I have been something of an idealist-optimist, so it is startling for me to discover that recently I have become a down-right Nietzschean! I find that the constructive work of the world is done by an appallingly small percentage of the general population. The rest simply don't give a damn..or they grow tired..or they failed to acquire when young the ideas that would vitalize them for the long decades.

I am not saying that they don't matter. They count as among the most precious items on earth. But they cannot be depended upon either to generate necessary new ideas or put them into operation if someone else generates them. Therefore those men and women who do have the energy to form new constructs and new ways to implement them must do the work of many. I believe it to be an honorable aspiration to want to be among those creators.

Final comment. I was about forty when I retired from the rat race, having satisfied myself that I could handle it if I had to. I saw then a man could count his life a success if he survived--merely survived -- to age sixty-five without having ended up in jail (because he couldn't adjust to the minimum laws that society requires) or having landed in the booby hatch (because he could not bring his personality into harmony with the personalities of others).

I believe this now without question. In come, position, the opinion of one's friends, the judgment of one's peers and all the other traditional criteria by which human beings are generally judged are for the birds. The only question is "Can you hang on through the crap they throw at you and not lose your freedom or your good sense?"

I am now sixty-four and three-quarters, and it's beginning to look as if I may make it. If I do, whatever happens beyond that is on the house..and of no concern to me.

Tower of Babble

By Bob Noppinger

The Scattering of the Hosts

While students were migrating aimlessly towards the end of the summer, they discovered a valley in the land of Baltimore and settled there. They said to one another, "Come, let us make bricks and bake them." They used bricks for stone and bitumen for mortar. Then they said, "Let us build ourselves a college and a Jesuit house with its top in the heavens; Let us make a name for ourselves lest we be scattered all over the earth."

And when it was completed, Fr. Sellinger came down to see the college and the Jesuit house the students had built. And Sellinger said, "Truly we are one people and we shall call this place Loyola and shall give light to all." So he summoned the scribes and they came forth and split up the crowd, taking each group into a different building. And so it was that nothing was seen of the others until a year from that day, when the chosen, who had mysteriously lessened in number, met again on the appointed grounds. There was much enthusiasm on that day and much hope, for their ambitions were high. But a strange force had fallen upon them in the space of a year and, as they tried to speak to one another, they found that they could not understand the other groups

For one spoke of integrals and functions, another spoke of prose and verse, another spoke in the tongue of laws and nations, another muttered of vectors and relativity, another spoke of cells and genes, another spoke of being and existentialism, another astonished the crowd with words of schizophrenia and paranoia, another spoke of debts and accounts, and yet another poor soul spoke of enantiomers and sterioisomers Many other tongues were spoken on that day that have not been recorded here. And confusion ran rampant among the crowd, and they scattered all over the campus in search of the scribes. And when they found them, they cried out for an interpreter, but the scribes would hear nothing of it, and bade them read their texts. So it was that they sat down among their manuscripts while the scribes again began to preach. And an uneasy peace descended upon the grounds.

Women's Sports:

Tennis, Lacrosse Teams Doing Well

By Marianna Bentzel

In the next few weeks, there will be much activity in the athletic department for women.

The women's tennis team exhibits much talent and dedication this season. With good returning players and a few new team members, it is a squad with much promise. On April 10, the team met Johns Hopkins on the Hopkins' court and won all but one singles match. The girls travelled to Georgetown yesterday in hopes of bringing home another victory. Finishing out the season, the team will play Goucher, UMBC, Western Maryland and Notre Dame.

While the tennis team works on the court, the women's lacrosse team exhibits its skill and determination on the field. Having already had two game cancellations this season, the girls are looking forward to their first game this afternoon. This game will be played on Loyola's home field at 4:00.

Another event of interest to any girl who competed on an inter-collegiate team will be the annual athletic banquet on May 8 in the Rathskellar. We ask all girls who were team members this year to please come to the Women's Athletic Office for further details.

Fun Day and the Superstars Competition are also upcoming events. We ask all interested girls to participate in these programs. There will be various categories of competition for women and it is hoped that many girls will take part. For any more information, feel free to come to the offices.

'Superstars' Starts Next Week

The campus version of the national television spectacle, the "Superstar" competition, is scheduled to get under way on Wednesday of next week and the events will continue until Wednesday of the following week. Applications for participation in this tourney will be accepted in the office of the athletic director until Tuesday, April 30.

As previously announced, the competitors will be scored on proficiency in a number of sports, including tennis, a 1/2 mile run, basketball shooting, football throwing, baseball hitting, the high jump and swimming. Some will be head-to-head confrontations, as in the swimming and running races. Others will be scored on the basis of degree of difficulty, such as the basketball shooting.

The athletes will be rated on the basis of their best five events but will not be allowed to compete in a sport in which they have participated as a member of an intercollegiate team. The grand finale will be an obstacles course for the top finishers.

A $1.00 fee is charged for each application. For further details contact the athletic department offices.

Ramm, Last Chance Gain Finals

In the Day Intramural Playoffs, Ramm won the winners' bracket of the A Division while Last Chance remained undefeated in the B Division.

As the playoffs wind down to their final games, five teams remain in both divisions of the double-elimination tournament.

In the A Division, Ramm looks as the team to beat on the basis of its 49-46 overtime win over Faculty. Bob Thompson led Ramm to the overtime win with a brilliant 17- point performance. John Sullivan led the supporting cast with 14 markers. Faculty was led by Brian Flangan who scored 15 points.

Other teams left include Cafeteria, pre-tournament favorite Pluto's Dogs, and the Bogarts. After losing to Ramm in the first round, the Bogarts have bounced back to beat Pu-I-Pie, and the surprising Foy's

Boys.

Last Chance whipped Second Chance, 50-32, in the B Division to become the only undefeated team in the division. Tom Titus was high with a 20-point performance while Paul McMahon aided the cause with 14 markers. Ed Burke paced the losers with 11 points.

Second Chance dropped into the losers' bracket, joining Ireland's Finest, the Guns, and the Pink Flamingoes.

Stickmen Nipped By Penn State

The Loyola lacrosse team dropped its seventh game of the season in dramatic style last Saturday, bowing in the final minute, 10-9 to Penn State.

Loyola played well in the first quarter, owning a 3-2 edge at the quarter's end. Penn State came back to hold a 4-3 margin at halftime.

The Hounds outscored the visiting Nittany Lions in the third period to tie it up at 6-6 going into the final quarter.

Penn State took command in the final period, building up a 9-7 advantage with five minutes left. Despite numerous penalties, Loyola stayed close until the three-minute mark when John Kellerman's goal brought Loyola to within one.

With 55 seconds left, junior John Boyle capped the comeback with a low shot on goal that trickled past the goalie into the net to tie it up.

An overtime seemed unavoidable. However, less than thirty seconds later, State scored to regain the lead after winning a faceoff. Loyola's last ditch attempt to tie the game failed as the attackmen could not penetrate.

Kellerman let Loyola with three goals while Rick Gegorek had a pair. Paul Plevyak, Tom Crompton, Don Rutkowski, and Boyle each scored once while Ray Schab had two assists.

Loyola's record dropped to 1-7, while Penn State improved its slate to 3-2.

Golfers Win Close Ones

By John Kane

The golf team, over the past two weeks, has won three out of four matches against Johns Hopkins, Baltimore U., Gallaudet, and Catholic U.

The squad first played Hopkins on April 11. Behind the efforts of Gary Miles and Roy Gagne, Loyola gained a narrow 9 1/2-8 1/2 verdict. Both Miles and Gagne had to win the last two holes to gain the victory, and they performed well under pressure. Mark Sanders contributed a blistering 78 to lead the scorers while Mike Ventura turned in an 18-hole total of 84.

On Tuesday, Loyola had a tri-meet with B.U., C. U., and Gallaudet at its Hunt Valley Course. The team emerged from the meet with two wins and a loss. The event was held under medal play (stroke play). Under those rules, each victorious player receives one point for the front nine, one for the back, and one for the match, making a total of 18 points for each team.

Against much-improved Gallaudet, Loyola took 16 of 18 points. Against Catholic, the Hounds won, 9 1/2 - 8 1/2. Baltimore U. beat the linksmen solidly though, 15-3. Medalist for Loyola was Mike Ventura and his 82 score. He was followed closely by Ed Barczak and Jim Baker who each had 85's. The Gallaudet match was never close. However, neither was the B.U. close. However, neither was the B.U. one as the Bees won handily. Jim Baker pulled out the close C.U. match with some fine shooting under pressure.

The three wins raised the golf team's record to 5-2.
